

Keeping Families Together With Mediation

Mediation aims to resolve conflict within the family and get relatives talking once again.

Relationships within families can often become strained. Clashes of lifestyles, communication problems, and people's different standards and aspirations can all lead to serious conflict and damaging consequences.

A lot of the time, people can sort out family arguments just by talking things through. But when things become more serious, they might benefit from additional help to get their relationships back on tracks.

This is when it can be beneficial to call in a family mediator.

The mediator will open up a dialogue between family members and will aim to repair their relationships so that the family can stay together: avoiding family breakdown and ultimately preventing potential homelessness.

Mediation is...
